

“Un-doing” – Essentials of fluid dancing & partnerwork in Contact Improvisation

Weekend-workshop, Sat & Sun 13th & 14th May 2017
in Ticino/Switzerland, with Thomas Mettler - CH

Our starting point in this dance-research is an “un-doing”. Through a deeper listening into our own bodies and senses we get ready for an “inner and outer research” – not for perfection – but for an understanding of basic fundamentals and principles for the most weightless possible “lifts” and partnering. Through an awakened awareness and listening into the energy of the other dancer, we dance contact improvisations effortless and smooth.

Through a deepening work with our FASCIAS we search for the “appropriate tone” of our muscles – and through the help of our BREATH and an understanding of TENSEGRITY – we discover the new possibilities of free floating bones and our light skeleton in a “fluid muscles and connective-tissue-system”.

Principles for a weightless, centered “floating on each other” are learned playfully, always with the clear goal to FLOAT on each others movements instead of “climbing” on my partner. Technique and strength shall come from the inside – to therefore and from within respect each owns body as well a the body of my partner(s).

An important and playfull part is the use of our BREATH in dance. To get in connection with our own breath, with the breath of the dance-movement of our partner and „to take a ride on that breath“ – TOGETHER.

“... to come to the point TO LET IT HAPPEN”

"CI is for me - in this moment of my life and dancing - more and more LESS AND LESS = more with less = listening listening listening instead of doing doing doing. (If I had only 1 word to describe that, I'd name it Un-doing.)"
